Forecast for Sunday 11 Jul 2021

Weather: Low cloud and mist will quickly lift and disperse during Sunday morning with some limited bright or sunny spells developing. However, scattered showers will soon break out, which are likely to become heavy, slow-moving and possibly thundery at times.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 600m: 20% chance during the morning, with cloud bases down to 400m or so, increasing to 80% by the afternoon, with brief deteriorations in any heavy showers in the afternoon and evening.

Visibility: Poor in low cloud and mist first thing. Becoming good during the morning as any cloud lifts off the summits, with distant peaks visible, albeit rather hazy. Temporary reductions to poor or moderate in heavy showers during the afternoon.

Meteorologist's View

Moderate to perhaps high UV levels on Sunday, where any sunnier breaks develop, especially in between the showers, so adequate protection is still recommended. Pollen levels will be high.
